

Re-election of Steel Official Under Probe

By JOHN A. HARRIS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Mundt (R-SD) says the Senate Rackets Committee is looking into circumstances surrounding David J. McDonald's re-election as president of the United Steelworkers Union.

Mundt said yesterday the investigation by committee staff members is designed to determine whether union funds were used to finance McDonald's recent campaign for another term in the union office.

Meanwhile, the committee prepared for another session next Wednesday with Dave Beck, Teamsters Union president. In his last appearance before the investigators, Beck declined to answer questions about his handling of union funds by invoking the Fifth Amendment protection against possible self-incrimination.

Beck was indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury at Tacoma, Wash., on two counts of income tax evasion. Atty. Gen. Brownell said last night the Justice Department is ready to prosecute Beck as soon as a trial date is set. The Teamsters chief posted $5,000 bond here yesterday pending an arraignment May 13.

Beck said last night in Atlantic City, N. J., he had "not a thing" to say about the indictment.

After Mundt reported the committee was checking into the Steelworkers election, another source said complaints about McDonald's election had been received from Berwick, Pa.

The union chief defeated Donald C. Rarick, a union member who was not known nationally before he tried for the top steelworkers post. McDonald defeated him by about two to one.

McDonald has written the committee there is "no corruption in our union" and that the organization will cooperate in any investigation.

Back When Cotton Was King in Hope

COTTON was the backbone of Hempstead economy back when this picture was made sometime between 1900 to 1910. The scene is where the Unity Baptist Church is now located. It was then known as the old ball park and fairground. This happened to be a banner cotton crop and bales were strewn from Cotton Row down Walnut to Fifth and on to the Fairgrounds. You could walk on the bales all the way. The house at far left is the C. C. Spragins home, next is the home of Mrs. Ola Williams and Miss Eva Owens' house. All three marked by writing. All three families are living in the same house. Actually the photo pictures the back of Mr. Spragins' home. The photo is the property of Mrs. Williams.

NATO May Pare Divisions for Atom Weapons

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

BONN, Germany (UP)—The North Atlantic Alliance's supreme commander Gen. Lauris Norstad may pare his demand for a minimum of 30 divisions ready to defend Western Europe, a highly authoritative source said today.

The source said Norstad's estimate that 30 divisions are an absolute necessity is not irrevocable. He may slash it when tactical atomic weapons and guided missiles are delivered to him in substantial numbers.

Norstad now is reviewing the whole question of Allied strength in the A-weapon and rocket era, the source said. The results of the review will be handed to the NATO Council of Ministers at its next session after this year. It will form the basis of a top-level decision on the number of troops and weapons, conventional and nuclear, now needed on the European colic to back NATO's stand against Soviet aggression.

That stand was spelled out in a communiqué issued last night at the end of the NATO Council's two-day meeting here.

The foreign ministers of the 15 NATO nations declared they were unified in their determination to answer any Soviet aggression with full-scale atomic retaliation.

Britain's decision to slash her own NATO forces by 13,000 was examined during the council session. An authoritative source said no attempt was made to get her to change this decision. The source said the results of Norstad's review will decide whether Britain's NATO Allies will accept her decision or exert pressure on her to ask no further cuts.

U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles met here today with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer for a discussion of West Germany's position in the East-West cold war of atomic threats and warnings.

While they were in conference, a Soviet embassy courier arrived at the chancellery and delivered a note from Ambassador Andrei Smirnov.

Rains Add to Flood Trouble in Texas Areas

By JACK WARNER

DALLAS, Tex., (UP)—Texas rivers, surging into new violence left one community a watery ghost town today.

Violent cloudbursts just as the rivers appeared receding yesterday poured up to six inches of rain on the Bosque and Brazos rivers, turning them into raging torrents in the latest of a series of flood and tornado disasters that started April 10.

Another flood was rolling down the Sabine in East Texas and West Louisiana. Flooding creeks caused persons in Wichita Falls to flee their homes.

Dennis, a little community 40 miles from Fort Worth in West Texas, was claimed by the Brazos as floodwaters came rushing through the town. Its 200 residents fled to a schoolhouse on high ground.

The Brazos was rising at Dennis early today at the rate of four inches an hour. Sgt. Cleo Yenny of Company B of the National Guard said.

Most of the persons who raced for safety at Dennis had left the schoolhouse and moved in with friends in drier cities.

Parker County Civil Defense Coordinator Charles Beard said it was impossible to get into Dennis. At the bridge over the Brazos 150 yards from the town, surging waters were six to seven feet deep.

Radio contact was maintained by the 45 National Guard troops on either side of the river. Yenny said there was a "pretty terrific" odor along its banks.

Beard said other families below Dennis along the river were being evacuated. One rescue worker received what Yenny called a "pretty bad spider bite," but the man was still working.

Livestock was seen hurtling down the river, unable to overcome the powerful current.

The death toll has reached 21 in the state of violent weather, with damage soaring upward as each river comes roaring out of its banks again. Both the Brazos and Bosque are flooding for the second time, and the Pecos in Southwest Texas is the only Texas river which hasn't flooded and it is running bankful.

Language Change Would Help Opera

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The vastly independent Ella Kazan must make another film for major studio before continuing with his own company.

The director has one more picture to make under an old contract to 20th Century-Fox, and it will be a story of the building of T.V.A. Now called "Mud on the Stars," it will get another title. Kazan will do the picture this year, as yet has no plans for his next project as an independent.

Kazan, who has a film contract with Rip Torn, entered the controversy over the Texas lads name. "Hain't he changed it yet," the director snapped. "It's a satire on all the outlandish names for leading men."

Thought while listening to Dorothy Kirstens lovely singing at the Jack Benny concert: Why does opera have to be sung in its original tongue? Seems to me opera fans would double or triple if folks could understand what the artists were singing about.

Oscar Hammerstein II proved with "Carmen Jones" that a good librettist could translate an opera into the American idiom without losing musical values. You say it's illogical for foreign operas to be sung in English? What could be more illogical than a Japanese girl (Madame Butterfly) singing to an American Navy man in Italian.

The new Coconut Grove emerged from its $600,000 face lift a handsome, tasteful pleasure palace with decor reminiscent of Chicago's Pump Room.

If there had been any doubts about Marilyn Monroe's ability as an actress, they are dispelled with her latest film "The Prince and the Showgirl." All the trouble Laurence Olivier had with her on the picture—and there was reported to be considerable—appears to be worth it.

Like Jean Harlow before her, MM has made the transition from sex queen to comedienne of top ability.

old, got through the preparatory surgery satisfactorily.

The surgeons did not cut into the tough outer tissue that covers the brains of the infants. Doctors have said the twins will have little chance of surviving if their brains are fused.

No date has been set for additional surgery.

A well-rounded spring wardrobe might very well include these three designs. Two of them emphasize the importance of black-and-white; the evening gown shows true elegance in the short length. Suit in black-and-white (left) has short jacket coupled with skirt that has high-rising waistband. Jacket fastens at side with big rhinestone button. Short evening dress (center) in gray Swiss organdie is a great beauty that relies on ruching and scrolls of self-piping for its misty look. Dress-and-jacket costume (right) is in black-and-white tie silk print. Under the jacket, there's a flame red silk chiffon empire top that's cut in surprise fashion. All three designs are from Hannah Troy. All three show hemlines at usual lengths.

The shirtwaist dress, prime fashion favorite for spring and summer, appears in a bridal version, too. This airy dress in white has lace collar and cuffs in a faded ivory color. Full skirt ends in cloud-like train. Dress is worn with full-length veil.

DOROTHY DIX

Mother Skipped Out—
Can Kids Win Her Back?

Dear Dorothy Dix: Two weeks ago my mother left home, taking my two little sisters with her. My brother and I (we're 14 and 16) are here with Dad. She says she's going to get a divorce because she likes someone else. We've tried everything to get her back. Since she works, the kids are alone part of the day and I am afraid they'll get into trouble.

Dad was always a good father and hard worker; he didn't drink or stay out. Occasionally he did complain about money but I don't think he was any grounder than most men. How can we persuade Mom to come home?

Dear Darlene: You, and your brother might start writing to your mother. Tell her what you're doing and how you miss her (but don't be weepy about it). Mention how difficult it is for you to get meals ready on time, but you're trying and maybe someday you'll be able to prepare dinners like you used to have. Tell her you hope the little ones are being well cared for, as you heard that they may be taken away if they're neglected. Apply pressure gently; don't be obvious about it. Above all,

Girls Report of Rape Labeled False

TURRELL (AP)—A 13-year-old white girl's report that she was raped by four Negroes has been labeled false by Dep. Sheriff Ivan Dickson.

The officer said yesterday, "We don't know what happened, but a doctor's examination showed the girl wasn't raped. We are still investigating."

He said the investigation apparently confirms a portion of the girl's story—that she was picked up as she walked along a rural road toward her home near Turrell.

The girl told officers she left some other teen-agers at a Turrell cafe last Friday night after "fussing" with them. She said four young Negroes forced her into a car, raped her and left her with her arms tied after the car stuck in heavy mud.

Dickson said the automobile was in the place described when he started his investigation. He said it had been stolen from a theater parking lot and had run out of gasoline.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I've been going with a sailor who says he loves me. I don't believe him; everybody says sailors can't be trusted.

Dear Janice: A man's integrity doesn't depend on the uniform he wears. Would you believe your beau if he wore civilian clothes? Then give him the same break in a sailor's garb.

Dear Dorothy Dix: What are the duties of a husband to his mother-in-law? In the 17 years of our marriage, my husband has seen my mother only once. He has never sent her a card, yet never forgets his mother.

Dear D. S.: Equal consideration should be given both mothers by you and your husband. It's your fault if mom hasn't had her share of attention. If your husband neglects her, double your own efforts, spend less time catering to your mother-in-law and balance the odds.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My boy friend and I are in our early twenties and truly love each other. No matter how convincing I try to be, he won't believe in my love. What proof can I possibly give, other than showering him with attention as I now do?

Dear Pamela: Give up. Unless you want to spend a lifetime proving the obvious, find a more trusting soul. A doubting Thomas makes a difficult husband.

General Natanael Greene, who was Washington's most trusted general in the Revolutionary War, built a house in Anthony, Rhode Island in 1770. It is still preserved as it was in his day.

Two elephants were recently borrowed from a circus to pull a 50-ton U. S. Army Patton tank from where it was stuck in the mud at Rome, Ga. The elephant couldn't budge the tank.

Telephone Rate Increase Okayed

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas Public Service Commission has approved telephone rate increases at Fordyce, Bearden and Sparkman totaling $17,847. Allied Telephone Co., in requesting the action, claimed it lost $20,500 a year through a revision of long distance toll arrangements with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

The U. S. Naval Bureau of Aeronautics now has a parachute that folds into a pack only two and a half inches thick.

Is your community's industrial arithmetic adding up to new plants? If not, you may have omitted an important factor in the formula for success, in the cases of Hot Springs, Bald Knob, West Helena, Manila and Magnolia—to cite a few—an available building proved the most important factor. If you don't have an available plant—consider building one, we can give you the formula.

TO Negotiate Wage Differences

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Highway Director Herbert Eldridge says the Arkansas Highway Commission will have to negotiate wage differences with the U. S. Labor Department on every project in the new federal highway program.

Eldridge made the statement yesterday in conjunction with an announcement that the Highway Commission has given up trying to reach agreement with the Labor Department on wage scales for a Pulaski County bridge job.

He said the Pulaski project is being built under the old aid law, which calls for 60 per cent of federal funds and 40 per cent of state funds. The new law provides 90 per cent of federal money.

The Labor Department has no voice in setting wage scales under the old act but the new law gives the department authority to fix pay rates.

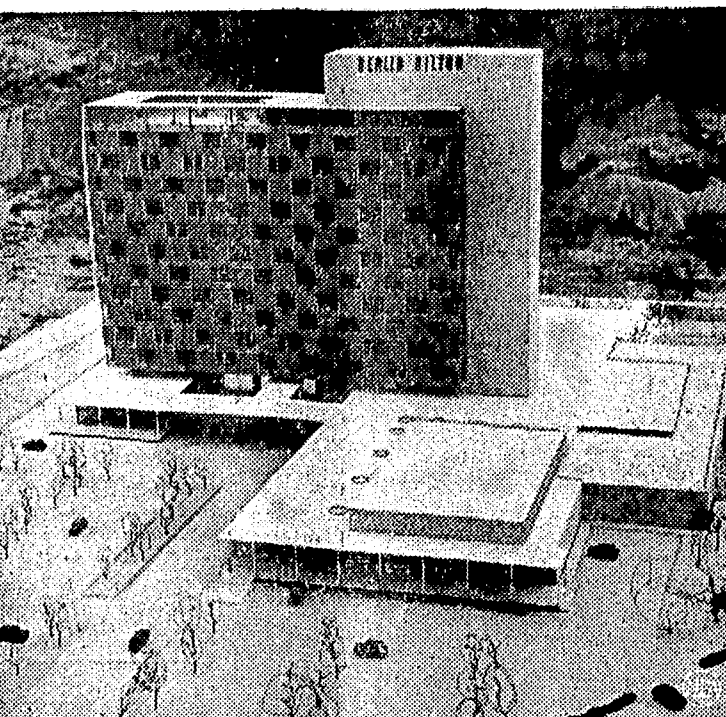

The Highway Department rejected federal scales for the Pulaski job on the ground they were out of line with current Arkansas rates.

Eldridge said the Highway Department has asked the Labor Department to set wage scales on several interstate projects in Arkansas—larger than the Pulaski job—but as yet no answer has been given.

HIGH DIVERS — Skin-diving in the "stratosphere" is the unique job of aircraft engineers John L. Peters, left, and G. H. Christiansen. The giant Air Force propjet transport C-130 Hercules is immersed in a huge tank at Marietta, Ga. The water's pressure simulates air pressure under high-altitude flight conditions. Christiansen's flashlight helps locate possible leaks in the pressurized fuselage as Peters makes notes on his underwater clipboard.

GRAND HOTEL — This scale model shows the luxurious appearance of the Berlin Hilton Hotel, scheduled to open its doors Jan. 1, 1959, in West Berlin, Germany. The 21-story, American-designed structure will have 350 rooms and is expected to cost more than four million dollars.

SEE NO EVIL—Chimpanzee, right, tried to throw a right cross but succeeded more in preventing his opponent from seeing what's up in the annual Shrine Circus at Medina Temple in Chicago. Battling for the title of "Chimp Champ," the sluggers had spectators roaring. They had their own simian handlers, two of whom carried the loser out. Chimps are members of the Bertram Mills Troupe.

A LONELY WALK

By M. E. CHASER

THE STORY: Milo March, the American insurance investigator, has been introduced to Ginna Balena, an Italian movie star, in Rome where he is investigating the death of a girl who probably was murdered. Ginna was associated with young Ricci Balena, who formerly was friendly with Anna Maria. Ginna introduces Milo to Balena and his father, Baron Gambero.

"He is young," Baron Gambero said. He managed to suggest a smile without moving the muscles of his face. It was quite a feat. "He still thinks that all women are his own personal domain."

I looked at him and pretended to be thinking. "You know, Baron, your name is familiar. I've seen you in the papers. I've read about you. You and I have a mutual acquaintance, Johnny Forrester."

"If possible, his face became even more frozen. 'Forrester?' he said. 'Oh, yes. An interesting type.'"

"Quaint," I agreed.

Baron Gambero was at least three inches shorter than I, but he managed to give the impression that he was taller. "I suppose it could be so described," he said coldly. "If you gentlemen will excuse me, I will see if our table is ready." He walked stiffly away.

"Well," Piero said dryly, "no one can accuse you of wasting time."

"If we're going to push, we might as well start right now. As a matter of fact, I think maybe it's better."

He shrugged. "You may be right, Milo. I'll duck out as soon as we've finished dinner. You want to borrow the Fiat?"

gun, a borrowed car," I said. "I ought to have something new and something blue. No, less work to take taxis. I've been thinking about something, Piero."

"I'd noticed," he said dryly.

"What happens when this case breaks into the open?"

"The head of our department will undoubtedly have to resign, possibly also the Minister, and it's not impossible that the whole government might fall. Certainly a coalition could bring it about. The Communists and the Socialists are almost strong enough. If one more strong party sided with them..."

"This I know," I said impatiently. "I meant what happens with the police. Do they go ahead sitting on the case or do they reopen it?"

He thought about it a minute. "They'd probably reopen it. But that doesn't mean there'd be a lot done."

"What about an autopsy?"

"No chance."

"Think you'd get assigned to it?"

"Probably. Unless I look too eager. But there'd be a limit to what they'd let me do."

"Still there'd be a lot of advantages to having it out in the open," I said. "For one thing, there'd be less chance of being thrown in the can for stirring around in the case."

She was coming back across the restaurant with a walk that for the moment threatened the popularity of Nino's food.

She sat down. "Ricci is a dear, but he can be a bore at times."

"He is in love with you?" I asked.

She shrugged. "He thinks he is," she said, "but he is so young. I prefer more mature men."

The glance she sent me from beneath her lashes meant to convince me of my maturity. "It is all arranged, Milo."

"What is?"

"For us to go to Baron Gambero's place," she said. I didn't miss the slight emphasis on us.

"He's having a party this week-end and you and I are going."

"So you got your boy friend to agree, but does the Baron know about it?"

"Oh yes. He made it a definite invitation. The party starts Saturday night."

"That would be in two days. I realized. I would have liked to move faster, but I couldn't complain."

"That's fine," I said.

"There's to be a big party Saturday night — and he gives such wonderful parties. Then on Sunday there will be a wild hunt. I suppose you'll like that."

"You mean you're allowed to shoot them in Rome?" I asked.

"Of course. It's every day."

"I don't like the sound of that."

"She said that George Gabel was going to shoot you?" she said.

"I think she meant it."

Looking at an English sheepdog, once it is full grown and wearing its long, raggedy coat, always makes one think that the breed could very well have been called Old English sheepdog, so much does each individual look like a bewhiskered old man.

Their appearance belies their activity for along with their rolling gait there is an appreciable amount of bounce and friendliness that expresses itself in a way quite unique to this limited breed.

The nickname "bobtail" belies the dog well, since a goodly number of sheepdog pups are whelped sans tail. This is a mutation which has been passed down through many generations.

Those pups born with tails are docked so that they, too, when their hair is freshly brushed up over their rumps, put an observer to some trouble determining whether they are coming or going.

Once a bobtail has reached maturity of structure and full growth of its long guard coat and woolly undercoat, it is able to withstand rigorous weather. Thus fortified it can thrive out of doors with the flocks it guards. Its intelligence lends itself to training for its duties as a herder and protector.

Blue, gray or merle and white are the accepted colors of the English (puppies are usually whelped black and white). Eyes should be dark or china. Blue or hazel eyes are not uncommon nor is it uncommon to find, let us say, one china and one brown eye.
